What I think important for the future is to turn the earth into a good earth where all living creatures can live a happy life. At the moment the earth is a bad earth with a lot of issues such as global warming, ozone layer depletion etc. As you know we, human beings, caused these problems.

Seeking for convenience and wealth, we, human beings, have transformed the earth into a bad one so rapidly. But human abilities are required to turn the bad earth back into a good one ! As I have mentioned human beings are responsible for making the bad earth but if we are able to do such a thing, we should be able to turn the bad earth into a good one. Human beings should be able to turn a lake of death with acid rain into a clean one where fish can live. We should be able to plant plants on deserted areas.

Also our heart is essential to change the bad earth into a good one. We human beings have a heart to think of others which animals do not have. If you imagine how difficult poor people's life is, you all will feel an urge to help them. This heart, an urge is so important. Even when we happen to advance technologies to improve our environmental issues, it is senseless without our heart or will to change the bad earth into a good one.

Once I have witnessed a shocking scene. There were some UNICEF volunteers on street calling out for donation. People passed by them as if they were hearing nothing. They walked past as if they knew nothing about those poor people suffering in other parts of the world. I thought they don't have the heart to think of others. The most important thing for each global citizen is to put the earth back into a good one while sharing the same feeling to transform the earth. Then the earth will be a good earth.
